

Please, please, please do not allow telemarketers to ignore those of us that signed up for the do not call list.

I have an autistic child and he demands 110% of my attention. Every time the phone would ring in the evening it would wake him up and he would be up all night. In addition, many times I would crash before the cutoff time so that I could get up early to go to work. I can not afford the interruptions.

In addition, I pay for telephone service so that I will have access to emergency services. It is extremely annoying to have someone interrupt the little peace and quiet that I get at home. I need this time if I am to support my family and keep my job.

I would love to charge these people a few hundred dollars everytime that they interrupt my peace just to teach them a lesson. When someone is trespassing on my private life, I should have the right to charge them a penalty fee for this.
